

This 1-Day workshop is perfect for people who are being groomed for leadership, and for those who have just recently entered into their first leadership role. The workshop will explore the list of skills and knowledge bases that every leader should be equipped with. It will also provide participants with a few “do it now” tools and techniques to get them started on their leadership journey. The session will put participants on a learning journey that will see them take control over their own leadership development. Most people recognise that there is a lot to learn about becoming a great leader, most just don’t know where or how to start!

- Any person who has been chosen to lead, and is being groomed for a leadership role
- Any person recently made a leader for the first time
- Any leader who is struggling because of a lack of real leadership skills and knowledge

This workshop will begin with some critical distinctions about what it means to be a leader. We will focus on Best Practice Leadership skills, tools, techniques and information. We will also explore the differences between transactional leaders and transformational leaders and how and when these approaches are viable. Participants will walk away with some tangible tools and techniques that can be put into practice immediately. Participants will also map out a learning journey that will take them solidly into the future.

- Create a working definition of what it means to be a great leader for each participant
- Explore tools, techniques and guidelines to follow for beginning the leadership journey
- Discuss leadership best practices
- Create a map of learning that every participant can engage in the coming years
